WALT DISNEY HOME VIDEO

Everyone Needs A Friend.

Sometimes, making friends comes easily. Sometimes, it's tougher. But we all know that a special friend to talk to, to share secrets with, and who cares about us is one of the greatest gifts. Like Big Mama says in the song, "The Best of Friends," "life's one happy game!" But there are rules to the game and sometimes they can be confusing for kids, just like they were for Tod and Copper. So let's take our cue from The Fox And The Hound and see what they can teach us about friendship.

- Your friends can be different from you.

Tod the fox and Copper the hound dog... now there are two friends who are about as opposite as you can imagine! In fact, they're supposed to be enemies, but no one told them that. So they did what came naturally to friends and played together. They knew that true friends show respect and caring, come in all shapes and sizes, and that differences aren't all that important.

Friendship tip: Being a friend means you care about another person and are sensitive to his or her needs. We all know that moods can change and that there are times to joke around, to be serious, and to feel empathy. It's all a question of respect—the respect we feel for others regardless of their differences. Parents: Ask your child about other kids they know. How are they similar? How are they different? Do differences matter when trying to be a friend? Ask them, "What's special about your friendships?"

- It's good to share what you know with your friends and to learn from them as well.

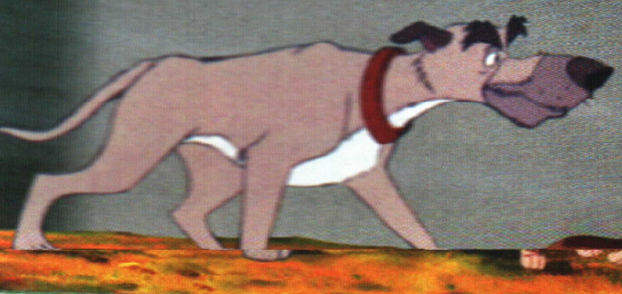
*W*hen Copper was a puppy, tripping over his own ears, his friend Chief taught him how to hunt. Soon Copper was able to smell out birds by himself. He got so good at tracking that Chief even got a little jealous. But then Amos reminded Chief that if it weren't for him, Copper would never have turned into such a good hunting dog. So, when Chief shared what he knew, both he and Copper grew and became better for it. That's how a true friendship works!



Friendship tip: Good friends share and are good listeners.

Sometimes just listening to something that's on a person's mind is enough to make that person feel better. Listening carefully means "I care about what you're saying." Parents: Ask your child, "What have you learned from your friends? What have you shared in return?"

- It's best to be yourself when you make new friends.

*R*emember the scene in The Fox And The Hound when Tod meets Dixie for the first time? He pretended he was an expert fisherman, when, in fact, he'd never fished in his entire life! He flipped, he flopped, nearly drowned himself, and ended up feeling very foolish. That's because he pretended to be someone he wasn't, trying to impress Dixie. What he didn't understand was that just being yourself makes the best impression. Dixie judged him on who he was, not on who he pretended to be. That's what true friends do.

Friendship tip: The best friendships are based on honesty. Parents: Suggest that your kids think of a time when they've shown off and pretended to be something they weren't. What was the result? Ask how honesty and being themselves would have made a difference. Like Big Mama says, there's nothing better than "Little Old Natural You."

- You should be friends with people you like and trust.

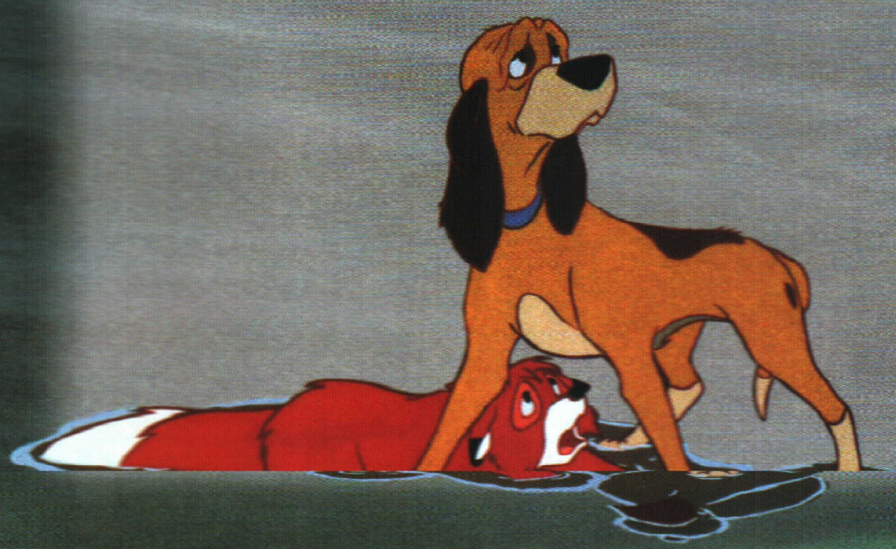
Sometimes friendship can be complicated. When Copper and Tod grow up, they realize that their friendship is special, unusual, and even dangerous. So when Tod is cornered and Amos is ready to shoot, Copper has to make a choice. When he chooses to stand by his friend, even though he knows his owner won't understand, he shows us that true friends are forever!



Friendship tip: Friendship lasts through the good times and the bad times. True friends are trustworthy, which means you can count on them through thick and thin.

Parents: Help your child understand that friends are voluntary, which means that they happen naturally. Have them think of friends they have and how they have supported each other.

So, being a friend is a special privilege. Sure it's a lot of work—look at what Tod and Copper had to go through as they got older. But they stood by each other, because deep down they knew all of the secrets of being a great friend, just like you do.

Let's sing along with Big Mama—

When you're the best of friends

Having so much fun together…
